Fact Sheet
Researchers Affiliated with the Consortium

CFSP supports research in financial systems and poverty through three funding mechanisms: member grants, seed grants and RFP grants. The following researchers are currently affiliated with the Consortium on Financial Systems and Poverty.

Members

- Juliano Assunção, PUC-Rio
- Abhijit Banerjee, MIT
- Francisco Buera, UCLA
- Douglas W. Diamond, University of Chicago
- Roberto Rigobon, MIT
- Kenneth Singleton, Stanford University
- Tavneet Suri, MIT
- Robert M. Townsend, MIT (Principal Investigator and CFSP Faculty Director)
- Christopher R. Udry, Yale University
- Christopher M. Woodruff, University of California-San Diego

Seed Grant Recipients

- Saide Aranzazu Salazar-Altamirano, Comisión Nacional Bancaria y de Valores, Mexico
- Arun Chandrasekhar, MIT doctoral student
- Joe Kaboski, Notre Dame
- Cynthia Kinnan, Northwestern University
- Horacio Larreguy, MIT doctoral student
Tae Jeong Lee, Yonsei University
Dario Luna Pla, Comisión Nacional Bancaria y de Valores, Mexico
Emmanuel Maliti, University of Siena, Italy
Esteban Puentes, Universidad de Chile
Sirenia Vazquez Baez, Comisión Nacional Bancaria y de Valores, Mexico

Request for Proposal Recipients

None at this time.

The Consortium on Financial Systems and Poverty (CFSP) is a private research organization comprised of leading and emerging economists. Our goal is to reduce global poverty and to improve the lives of the world’s poor through helping to identify, define and develop efficient financial systems. We strive to generate tangible and objective results that have meaningful lessons for policymakers, researchers and stakeholders. Please visit our website at www.cfsp.org to learn more about our work.

April 2011